No Official Word From New Delhi On Russian Oil, Says Moscow

■ Kremlin plays down claims linked to India US trade deal, stresses strategic partnership

New Delhi: Russia has indicated that it has received no official communication from India regarding any plan to halt purchases of Russian oil, even as claims circulate about such a commitment being part of a recent trade understanding between India and the United States. Moscow's position comes after US President Donald Trump announced a trade deal with India, stating that tariffs on Indian goods would be sharply reduced in return for New Delhi stopping imports of Russian crude. According to the announcement, tariffs were brought down from earlier levels to eighteen percent, with India expected to shift its energy sourcing toward the United States and possibly Venezuela.

India and China Trade Reaches Historic Peak Signalling Warmer Relations

■ Bilateral economic engagement expands as diplomatic ties show steady recovery

New Delhi: Trade between India and China climbed to an all time high of 155 billion US dollars in 2025, reflecting a strong revival in economic engagement between the two Asian neighbours.

The record figure represents an annual growth of more than twelve percent and indicates that commercial links are moving ahead despite past political tensions. Chinese diplomatic representatives in India highlighted that relations between the two countries have entered a new and improved phase following high level political dialogue in recent months.

The meeting between the leadership of both nations in Tianjin last year was described as a turning point that helped move ties from a phase of reset to one of constructive cooperation. Since then, interactions at governmental and business levels have increased noticeably.

Selective Silence: Goa's Noise Rules and the Politics of Convenience

Goa's long-running debate over noise pollution is no longer just about decibel levels or late-night music. It has become a test of governance, fairness and credibility. The problem is not the existence of rules. It is how those rules are enforced, against whom, and when.

Noise pollution is real and undeniable. Residents across North Goa's coastal belt have been complaining for years about blaring music from beach shacks, nightclubs and open-air parties that stretch well past midnight. The impact is not trivial. Sleep is disrupted, daily life suffers, and local communities feel increasingly alienated in places they once called quiet and livable. The law is meant to protect them.

Yet when enforcement finally arrives, it appears to land disproportionately on weddings, village feasts and religious or community celebrations. Families are fined, events are shut down, and organisers are warned in the name of environmental discipline. At the same time, commercial establishments that generate far greater and more sustained noise often appear to operate with remarkable flexibility. This contrast lies at the heart of public anger.

Noise regulations exist for a reason. They are designed to balance individual freedom with collective well-being. But laws lose moral authority when they are applied selectively. When enforcement seems guided less by principle and more by convenience, influence or optics, it sends a dangerous message. That compliance is expected only from those without power.

The northern coastal stretch offers a glaring example. During peak tourist season, music routinely spills from beach venues late into the night. Complaints from residents are frequent, but action is inconsistent. Inspections are often predictable. Volumes dip temporarily, only to rise once officials leave. The impression that some businesses are effectively untouchable has become widespread, whether or not it is formally true. Perception, in governance, matters almost as much as fact.

Noise regulations exist for a reason. They are designed to balance individual freedom with collective well-being. But laws lose moral authority when they are applied selectively. When enforcement seems guided less by principle and more by convenience, influence or optics, it sends a dangerous message. That compliance is expected only from those without power.

The northern coastal stretch offers a glaring example. During peak tourist season, music routinely spills from beach venues late into the night. Complaints from residents are frequent, but action is inconsistent. Inspections are often predictable. Volumes dip temporarily, only to rise once officials leave.

By contrast, weddings and festivals are easy targets. They are visible, time-bound and usually lack legal muscle. Penalising them is administratively simple and publicly defensible under the letter of the law. But it raises an uncomfortable question. Is the objective really to reduce noise pollution, or merely to demonstrate action?

Cultural celebrations are not noise-free, nor should they be exempt from regulation. But they are episodic, rooted in community life, and rarely driven by profit. Treating them with the same rigidity as commercial nightlife, while ignoring or soft pedalling the latter, creates a hierarchy of rights. Tourists and businesses appear privileged. Locals are asked to adjust, repeatedly.

This unevenness has broader consequences. It erodes trust in institutions tasked with regulation. It deepens the sense that Goa's development model prioritises revenue over residents. And it feeds a narrative that laws are not neutral instruments, but tools wielded selectively.

What is missing is a coherent, transparent noise management policy that applies across the board. One that uses technology rather than discretion. Continuous noise monitoring, publicly accessible data, and time bound response mechanisms would reduce arbitrariness. Clear zoning rules must be enforced consistently, whether the source is a five-star venue or a family mandap.

Equally important is political clarity. Authorities cannot speak of sustainability while tolerating excess in the name of tourism. Nor can they invoke environmental concern only when it is convenient. Sustainable tourism demands discipline, not indulgence.

Goa's identity has always rested on a balance. Between celebration and calm, tourism and tradition, freedom and responsibility. That balance is now under strain. Noise pollution is the symptom. Selective enforcement is the disease.

If the state wants public cooperation, it must first earn public confidence. And that will only happen when the law sounds the same, no matter who is playing the music.

Goa's Rejection of the Tiger Reserve Plan Raises Alarming Questions

By Suraj Nandrekar

When a matter as serious as wildlife conservation reaches India's highest court, the natural expectation is that all stakeholders will engage in good faith with the scientific evidence and legal frameworks on offer. Instead, the Goa government's blunt dismissal of the Central Empowered Committee's recommendation to notify a tiger reserve in the state has exposed deeper problems in how environmental priorities are negotiated and interpreted. The government's response, calling the report "vague" and lacking scientific rigour, raises legitimate questions but it also reveals a worrying tendency to prioritise political positioning over ecological stewardship. At the heart of the dispute is the proposal to designate parts of the Cotigao-Mhadei forest complex in Goa as a tiger reserve a step recommended by a court-appointed committee after long deliberation. For conservationists, a reserve would not only help protect an endangered species but also strengthen broader habitat corridors that allow wildlife to move between protected areas across state borders. Declare a tiger reserve, and the area gains stronger legal protection and dedicated funding, enhancing anti-poaching patrols, scientific monitoring and community livelihood programmes that align with long-term ecosystem health. The government's counterargument centres on its assertion that there are no resident or breeding tiger populations in Goa. On the surface, this sounds like a fair point: tiger reserves are meant to safeguard thriving populations, not merely scenic forested areas. But this interpretation is myopic. Tigers do not respect artificial boundaries; their survival depends on habitat connectivity. The presence of transient animals moving through Goa's protected forests indicates that the state sits within a larger ecological matrix. Protecting those corridors could be as crucial as safeguarding resident populations in core tiger landscapes elsewhere. Instead of engaging with the underlying ecological reality, the state government has leaned heavily on semantics. The report is criticised for allegedly overstepping its remit and for failing to measure local habitation impact. But conservation planning must account for people and wildlife alike; dismissing concerns about local residents without proposing constructive alternatives does little to foster trust. Protecting wildlife should not mean sidelining human interests precisely the point that integrated conservation strategies try to address. The government's insistence that existing sanctuaries and protected areas already provide sufficient safeguards is equally hollow. Legal designation matters because it comes with stronger management plans, sustainable financing and a level of national commitment that ordinary protected status cannot guarantee. Choosing to remain within the comfort zone of existing designations is tantamount to incrementalism in the face of an urgent crisis. Part of the government's pushback also reflects fear of potential restrictions on land use, developmental pushback from local communities, and another layer of regulatory oversight. These concerns cannot be dismissed out of hand; they deserve thoughtful engagement. But rejecting an entire proposal on the basis that it might trigger "resentment" or "human-animal conflict" without offering a credible mitigation strategy is political avoidance, not environmental leadership. The bigger issue here is not just about tigers. It is about Goa's role in a rapidly changing ecological landscape, where habitats are shrinking, extreme weather events are increasing, and development pressures tug relentlessly at fragile ecosystems. What Goa needs is not a binary choice between development and conservation but a framework where both can co-exist sustainably. A tiger reserve could have been a catalyst for bringing together scientists, tribal and forest communities, policy makers and civil society to forge such a framework. Instead, the dismissal of the CEC report risks sidelining serious discourse in favour of defensive posturing. There are no easy answers in conservation. But shrinking from bold, science-based proposals only accelerates environmental degradation. If Goa truly cares about its forests, its wildlife and its future generations, it must step beyond reflexive rejection and engage in collaborative, evidence-driven planning. Otherwise, the real loss will not be a proposed tiger reserve on paper — it will be a missed opportunity to secure a meaningful conservation legacy for the state.

HC Allows State to Pay Fire Victims' Families, Recover Amount From Accused

■ Court seeks asset details of Luthra brothers, others in Birch by Romeo Lane case.

Team Goemkarponn

PORVORIM: The High Court of Bombay at Goa has accepted the State government's proposal to disburse compensation to the families of those killed in the Birch by Romeo Lane nightclub fire and later recover the amount from the accused persons, including the Luthra brothers.

The direction was issued on Tuesday while the court was hearing a suo motu Public Interest Litigation (PIL) arising from the tragic fire incident, which claimed 25 lives and left several others injured.

The Bench instructed the State to compile and place on record a detailed list of assets belonging to the accused, including brothers Gaurav and Saurabh Luthra and the disqualified sarpanch of the Arpora-Nagoa village panchayat, Roshan Redkar, among others.

Observing that compensation to the victims' families should not be delayed, the High Court permitted the government to proceed with interim relief, making it clear that the amount would subsequently be recovered from those found responsible for the incident. The matter has been posted for further hearing on February 16.

During earlier proceedings, the court had issued notices to multiple parties, including various village panchayats. The principal respondents include the Luthra brothers and Redkar. The court was informed that notice has already been served on Redkar, while the Luthra brothers are currently in judicial custody.

The Bench directed the State to ensure that notices are served on all accused through the police.

Advocate General Devidas Pangam later told the media that the State had urged the court to allow immediate compensation, noting that many of the victims came from economically weaker backgrounds and may not be in a position to pursue lengthy legal remedies.

In a statement, Sawant said Rahul Gandhi has, over the past two days, pushed what he termed "non-facts and misleading narratives" against Prime Minister Narendra Modi. He objected particularly to Gandhi's remarks on India-US trade engagement, which the Congress leader described as a "cover-up," while alleging that the Prime Minister was "compromised."

"These are reckless fabrications aimed solely at misleading the public. This is not dissent, but irresponsible conduct that undermines the nation's interests.

India deserves facts, not distortion and deceit," Sawant said.

The Chief Minister asserted that Prime Minister Modi's credibility is rooted in decades of public service and governance.

"The Prime Minister's credibility is not built through propaganda or purchased influence. It is earned through hard work, decisive leadership, reforms and an unwavering focus on

HC Directs Time-Bound Probe Into GCA Fund Misuse Allegations

Team Goemkarponn

PANAJI: The High Court of Bombay at Goa has directed the Inspector General of Societies (IGS) to complete, within six months, an inquiry into complaints alleging large-scale financial irregularities by the managing committee of the Goa Cricket Association (GCA). The direction was issued while hearing a petition filed by Mahesh Chavan, who alleged that crores of rupees received by the GCA from the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) were diverted and misused. The petitioner claimed that funds earmarked for developing cricket infrastructure in

Goa were instead spent on events jointly organised by the BCCI and the GCA, amounting to financial impropriety. Chavan sought a detailed court-monitored inquiry into the matter and also requested the appointment of an administrator to run the GCA until the probe was concluded. Opposing the plea, Advocate General Devidas Pangam submitted that the Inspector General of Societies has no statutory authority to appoint an administrator, stating that such powers rest with the government. He informed the court that the IGS is empowered to inquire into complaints and that a show-cause notice has already been issued to the GCA managing committee in connection with the allegations. The Advocate General further told the court that the matter is scheduled for hearing before the Inspector General on February 27, 2026, and that four months had been sought to conduct further investigation. However, counsel for the petitioner, Rohit Bras D'Sa, pressed for a definite timeline for completing the inquiry, pointing to prolonged inaction despite the seriousness of the allegations. After considering submissions from both sides, the Bench directed the Inspector General of Societies to hear both the complainant and the respondents and proceed with the inquiry.

Goa Launches e-Zero FIR to Fast-Track Action in Cyber Fraud Cases

■ New module to enable instant registration, quicker fund freezing and faster recovery for victims.

Team Goemkarponn

Panaji: In a significant step to strengthen the fight against cyber financial fraud, the Goa government on Monday launched the e-Zero FIR Module, aimed at enabling faster reporting and swift recovery of defrauded amounts. Unveiled by Chief Minister Dr Pramod Sawant at the valedictory of the State-Level DGSP/IGSP Conference 2025, the e-Zero FIR system allows immediate online registration of FIRs in cyber fraud cases, irrespective of jurisdiction. This ensures that crucial time is not lost during the initial hours following a fraud, which is critical for freezing suspicious bank transactions.

Explaining the importance of the initiative, Dr Sawant said the new mechanism will empower Goa Police to take instant action across districts, improving coordination with banks, financial institutions and cybercrime cells.

The system is expected to significantly increase the chances of tracing money trails and recovering funds for victims of online scams. Senior police officials said the e-Zero FIR will remove procedural delays that often hamper cybercrime investigations, especially in cases involving interstate or online transactions. Once registered digitally, the case can later be transferred to the concerned police station for detailed investigation without affecting immediate preventive action.

Rs 10-crore road beautification project launched in Vasco

Team Goemkarponn

VASCO: Vasco MLA Krishna Salkar on Tuesday inaugurated an ambitious road beautification and redevelopment project covering two of the city's busiest stretches — Swatantra Path and FL Gomes Road — marking the start of a major makeover of Vasco's urban landscape. The works were launched in the presence of Mormugao Municipal Council chairperson Girish Borker, city ward councillor Shami Salkar and local residents. The ₹10-crore project is scheduled to be completed within a year and will be taken up in a phased manner. Speaking to reporters after the launch, Salkar said the project has been designed to address long-pending civic issues while preserving the emotional and cultural identity associated with the two iconic roads. "Swatantra Path and FL Gomes Road are deeply connected with the memories of Vascokars. Over the years, trees have aged, footpaths have deteriorated and gutters have not seen proper restoration, resulting in recurring problems," he said. He explained that the redevelopment will be executed in four major stages — restoration and repair of gutters, paving of footpaths, installation of illumination systems and landscaping with new tree plantation. Separate ducts will also be created for underground cables and pipelines to prevent repeated digging in the future.

Goa Congress Slams Union Budget 2026-27, Alleges State "Ignored and Short-Changed"

■ Calls CM's Claims Hollow, Says Double-Engine Government Has Delivered 'Zero for Goa'

Team Goemkarponn

Panaji: The Goa Pradesh Congress Committee (GPCC) has strongly condemned the Union Budget 2026-27, alleging that Goa has been completely ignored and financially short-changed despite claims by Chief Minister Pramod Sawant that the Budget is "visionary, people-centric and growth-oriented."

In a sharp statement, the Congress said the Chief Minister himself has admitted that Goa will receive ₹5,570.83 crore as tax devolution in FY 2026-27, stressing that tax devolution is a constitutional entitlement and not a special package or generosity by the Centre.

The party asserted that not a single rupee in this amount reflects a Goa-specific decision in the Union Budget.

The GPCC pointed out that on January 11, 2026, the Chief Minister had personally demanded a special package of ₹4,000 crore for Goa from the Union Government, but the Budget response was "zero."

Former Congress minority leader flags hygiene issues at Vasco fish market

Team Goemkarponn

VASCO: Former Congress minority chairman Nazir Khan on Tuesday raised serious concerns over hygiene and management at the newly inaugurated Vasco fish market, alleging that poor enforcement has defeated the very purpose of the modern market complex

Addressing the media after visiting the facility in the afternoon, Khan said he was disturbed to find fish vendors operating outside the market premises, selling fish on the roadside and leaving waste water behind, resulting in a foul stench in the area. He alleged that the situation posed a health risk to both vendors and residents. "The fish market is a municipal project and the MMC chairperson is fully responsible for its functioning. However, the MLA has taken credit for the project. While we welcome the new market, what is happening on the ground is unacceptable," Khan said. He claimed to have witnessed a municipal worker collecting 'sopo' from fish vendors operating on the roadside. "When I questioned how money was being collected from vendors selling outside the market, the worker asked me to approach the chief officer or senior MMC officials," he said.

Goa: Kotak Mahindra Asset Management Company Ltd. announces the launch of the Kotak Services Fund, an open ended equity scheme following the service theme. Opening on 4th February 2026 and closing on 18th February 2026, the New Fund Offer (NFO) enables investors to access India's core growth engine-the services sector that contributes 55% to the country's GVA (Gross Value Added) and employs 31.5% of country's workforce¹.

With diverse sectors such as consumer services, telecom, healthcare, logistics, financial services, IT, power and oil & gas scaling rapidly, India's services economy continues to unlock multiple structural growth drivers for long-term investors*.

The Kotak Services Fund aims to capture this multi-dimensional opportunity through a disciplined investment strategy anchored in Growth at Reasonable Price (GARP) and a bottom-up BMV framework (Business, Management, Value). The fund will invest across market capitalisations, focusing on quality businesses with strong cash flows, scalable models, and long-term compounding potential. Nilesch Shah, Managing Director, Kotak Mahindra Asset Management Company Ltd., said, "India's services economy is undergoing a structural shift, driven by rising incomes, greater digital adoption, and expanding urbanisation. These forces are reshaping how Indians consume, transact, and access essential services. With the Kotak Services Fund, we aim to construct a portfolio that can capture the evolving opportunities within India's services economy and deliver long term value for investors." Rohit Tandon, Fund Manager for Kotak Services Fund, said, "The services theme offers both stability and growth through its breadth across consumption driven and export driven segments. The services sector, in our view, represents one of the most compelling combinations of resilience and scalability in India's market landscape. At the Kotak Services Fund, our portfolio construction will lean toward companies that have proven their ability to sustain margins, upgrade business models, and deploy capital judiciously. Our investment conviction is anchored in the belief that disciplined selection of such companies can translate into stable, long term wealth creation for investors."

The Kotak Services Fund is being launched at a time when India's service-oriented enterprises are reshaping the way households, businesses, and institutions function. As customer expectations shift and service delivery models advance, the sector is experiencing strong growth in enterprises that are leveraging specialization, technology-enabled processes, and operational discipline to scale efficiently.

The NFO offers a minimum investment of ₹1000 and any amount thereafter during the offer period. The fund is suitable for investors seeking long term capital appreciation through a diversified portfolio of companies engaged in service oriented businesses, as outlined within the scheme's product suitability disclosures.

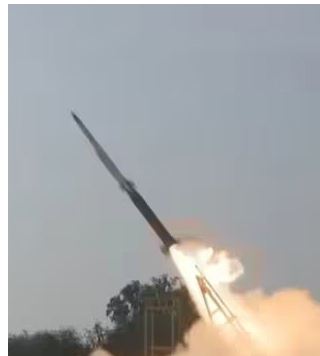

India Successfully Demonstrates Advanced Ramjet Missile Technology

■ Test places country among select nations with capability to build long range air to air systems.

New Delhi: India achieved a major milestone in defence technology with the successful flight test of solid fuel ducted ramjet system, a key platform for developing next generation long range air to air missiles. The demonstration was carried out by the Defence Research and Development Organisation at the Integrated Test Range in Chandipur along the Odisha coast.

The achievement positions India among a small group of countries that possess this complex propulsion technology. Defence officials said the system is expected to provide a significant tactical advantage by enabling missiles with greater range, speed and accuracy.

According to the defence ministry, the trial validated the performance of several critical subsystems including the nozzle less booster, the ramjet motor and the fuel flow controller. The vehicle was first propelled by a ground booster to reach the required Mach speed, after which the ramjet mechanism took over and functioned as planned. Data from the flight was captured through multiple tracking instruments installed at the test range and along the Bay of Bengal coastline. Scientists confirmed that the parameters recorded during the mission matched the expected design objectives, marking the test as a complete success. Defence Minister Rajnath Singh congratulated the DRDO and partner industries for the accomplishment, describing it as a significant step toward strengthening the country's indigenous missile capabilities. Senior officials noted that mastery of this technology would allow India to develop highly advanced air combat systems in the future.

The launch was overseen by experts from various DRDO laboratories, including the Defence Research and Development Laboratory, High Energy Materials Research Laboratory, Research Centre Imarat and the Integrated Test Range. The chairman of DRDO also commended the teams involved for their coordinated effort and technical excellence. The solid fuel ducted ramjet concept is considered crucial for modern aerial warfare as it supports sustained high speed propulsion without the need for onboard oxidiser.

Three private sector led consortiums have now been shortlisted to develop the aircraft, and a final partner is expected to be chosen within the next few months. Senior defence officials confirmed that an overwhelming response was received from industry during the pre qualification process. The shortlisted groups will soon receive a formal request for proposal to submit cost bids for manufacturing five prototypes of the stealth fighter. The first prototype is targeted to roll out within the next three to four years, subject to successful design and testing milestones.

Although the names of the final contenders have not been officially disclosed, multiple major defence players are understood to have participated, including Tata Advanced Systems, Adani Defence, Larsen and Toubro in collaboration with Bharat Electronics Limited, along with other industry combinations.

US Tariff Cut A Positive Signal For Indian Exports, Says Finance Minister

■ Reduction to 18 percent expected to restore competitiveness and expand market access

New Delhi: Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman has described the new trade understanding with the United States as highly encouraging for India, saying the decision to reduce tariffs on Indian goods to 18 percent will give a strong push to exports and help domestic industries regain lost ground.

Speaking on Tuesday, the minister expressed confidence that lower duties would revive demand for Indian products in the American market. She said exporters who had struggled under the earlier high tariff regime would now find better opportunities, while also continuing to benefit from alternative markets developed over the past year.

The earlier levy of 50 percent had sharply affected shipments from India by increasing costs for American buyers and reducing profit margins for manufacturers. Key sectors such as steel, aluminium, textiles, engineering goods and certain agricultural products witnessed a decline in orders as importers shifted to suppliers from other countries.

Under the new arrangement announced by US President Donald Trump, tariffs on Indian goods will be aligned with the levels faced by most Asian economies, which range between 15 and 19 percent. The finance minister noted that detailed terms of the agreement would be released soon, but the broad framework was clearly favourable for Indian businesses. Economic analysts have pointed out that the punitive duties imposed last year had led to a noticeable fall in India's trade surplus with the United States and contributed to weak investor sentiment. Several labour intensive industries, including apparel, footwear and jewellery, were among the worst affected as they compete primarily on price.

The revised tariff structure is expected to restore India's advantage over regional competitors such as Vietnam and Bangladesh, which currently face higher duties.

Industry bodies believe the change will help manufacturers recover orders, increase production and protect employment in export oriented clusters.

The government views the development as part of a larger effort to deepen economic engagement with the United States. Officials said the improved access would complement India's strategy of expanding manufacturing under the Made in India initiative and strengthening integration with global supply chains.

New Delhi: West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Tuesday appeared in person before the Supreme Court and told the Chief Justice that justice was crying behind closed doors, as she pressed her challenge against the Election Commission's Special Intensive Revision of voter rolls in the state. Banerjee sought permission from the court to argue her own case, filing an application to appear as a party in person. Official arrangements confirmed her presence in Courtroom 1 along with her legal team. The matter was heard by a bench comprising the Chief Justice of India along with two other judges. The petition questions the ongoing revision of electoral rolls being carried out by the Election Commission ahead of the 2026 West Bengal Assembly elections. Similar pleas filed by Trinamool Congress leaders Derek O'Brien and

Don't Want To Jinx It, But Dew Is India's Big Worry, Says MS Dhoni

■ Former captain calls 2026 squad one of the most dangerous but flags conditions as key factor

New Delhi: As India prepare to begin their T20 World Cup 2026 campaign, former captain MS Dhoni has described the current team as one of the most formidable in the tournament, while cautioning that evening dew could become a decisive challenge for the hosts. India will open their title defence against the United States at Mumbai's Wankhede Stadium later this week. The side enters the competition as reigning champions after lifting the trophy in 2024 under Rohit Sharma, adding to the historic triumph achieved in the inaugural 2007 edition led by Dhoni himself. Speaking during a recent interaction, Dhoni praised the depth and experience within the squad. He said the team possessed all the ingredients required for success in the shortest format, including players accustomed to handling high pressure situations over a long period. However, the legendary wicketkeeper highlighted weather conditions, particularly dew during night matches, as a major concern. He explained that moisture on the outfield often alters the balance between bat and ball, making the toss unusually important and reducing the effectiveness of bowlers.

Dhoni noted that if conditions remained neutral, India would emerge victorious more often than not against top opponents. Yet he stressed that T20 cricket remains unpredictable, where a single off day for a few players can change the result completely. He pointed out that the real test comes when an opposition player produces a brilliant performance on a crucial day, especially in knockout matches. According to him, avoiding injuries and ensuring that every player executes his assigned role would be essential for a successful campaign. Despite the caution, Dhoni expressed strong belief in the side led by Suryakumar Yadav. He said the combination of skill, confidence and big match experience made India a serious contender for a record third T20 world title. The former skipper concluded on a hopeful note, saying he preferred not to speak too confidently to avoid tempting fate, but reiterated that the current Indian unit stands among the most dangerous teams in world cricket.

AFI Sets Tough Standards For 2026 Commonwealth Games Selection

■ Athletes in 17 events must equal or better national records to qualify.

New Delhi: The Athletics Federation of India has announced strict qualification norms for the 2026 Commonwealth Games in Glasgow, raising the performance bar to ensure only top class athletes represent the country. Competitors in as many as 17 disciplines will need to either match or break existing national records to secure a place in the Indian contingent.

FEDERATION OF INDIA

The Commonwealth Games are scheduled to be held in Scotland from July 23 to August 2 with a reduced athletics programme. Each participating nation will be allowed to send a maximum of 32 athletes, including not more than competitive squad. In the men's category, qualification marks have been set higher than current national records in events such as the 100 metres, 400 metres, 1500 metres, 110 metres hurdles and hammer throw. Sprinter Animesh Kujur, who holds the national 100 metres record of 10.18 seconds, will need to clock 10.16 seconds to make the cut. Similarly, 110 metres hurdles record holder Tejas Shirse must improve his best of 13.41 seconds to meet the required standard.
