

Smart Metering Is Transparent And The Need Of The Hour: CEE Fernandes

■ Power Minister Assures Consumers No Charges For Installation Under RDSS Scheme.

Team Goemkarponn

Panaji: Chief Electrical Engineer (CEE) Stephen Fernandes today said that the introduction of smart metering in Goa is transparent, beneficial and necessary to modernise the power distribution system, even as the issue has drawn political debate in some quarters. Speaking at a public interaction, Fernandes said smart metering has become politically sensitive, with opposition driven more by political motives than technical facts. He clarified that smart meters will not alter the basic method of recording electricity consumption, as Goa is already using electronic meters.

“Smart metering will not change consumption recording. It will only provide better insights, improve efficiency and enhance transparency,” Fernandes said, urging Goa not to compare itself with states like Bihar or Uttar Pradesh, as the State already has a

Terrorist Eliminated in Kishtwar Encounter as Operations Continue

■ Joint forces intensify campaign against militants in difficult terrain ahead of high level visit.

New Delhi: A terrorist was killed on Wednesday evening during an encounter with security forces in Jammu and Kashmir's Kishtwar district as part of an ongoing joint anti militancy operation.

The clash took place after troops re established contact with a group of armed militants in the Dichhar area, where search teams had been tracking suspicious movement for several days. The operation is being carried out by units of the Army along with Jammu and Kashmir Police and the Central Reserve Police Force. Security officials stated that coordinated action by the forces led to the elimination of one militant, while efforts are continuing to locate others believed to be hiding in the surrounding forests. The region is known for its steep mountains and dense vegetation, making operations slow and challenging. For several weeks, security agencies have been conducting an extensive drive to dismantle militant networks active in the Kishtwar and Chenab Valley belt.

When Savings Feel Unsafe, the Cooperative Ideal Begins to Crumble

The sudden revocation of the No Objection Certificate granted to the Tirumalla Tirupati Multistate Co-operative Credit Society has once again exposed a hard truth about cooperative banking in India. Even before any formal restrictions on withdrawals, panic spread across its Goa branches, with depositors rushing to secure their savings. That reaction alone says more than any official clarification ever could. It reflects a deep and growing loss of faith in the cooperative financial system.

Cooperative banks were never meant to inspire fear. They were built on trust, proximity and collective responsibility. For decades, they served as lifelines for farmers, small traders, self-employed workers and middle-class families who found mainstream banking either inaccessible or indifferent. The promise was simple. Your money was safe because the institution belonged to the community itself. Today, that promise rings hollow.

The Tirumalla Tirupati episode is not an isolated case. It comes against the backdrop of repeated cooperative bank failures in Goa and elsewhere. Depositors here still remember the collapse of urban cooperative banks that left savings frozen for years and, in some cases, wiped out entirely. Every new regulatory action, even when described as precautionary, reopens those wounds. The result is predictable. People panic first and ask questions later.

What makes cooperative bank investments particularly unsettling is their fluid and opaque nature. Unlike scheduled commercial banks, many cooperative institutions operate with weak governance structures, inconsistent audits and limited professional oversight. Their balance sheets are often difficult for ordinary depositors to understand, and regulatory intervention usually arrives only when damage is already done. By then, trust has evaporated.

The Tirumalla Tirupati episode is not an isolated case. It comes against the backdrop of repeated cooperative bank failures in Goa and elsewhere. Depositors here still remember the collapse of urban cooperative banks that left savings frozen for years and, in some cases, wiped them out entirely. Every new regulatory action, even when described as precautionary, reopens those wounds. The result is predictable. People panic first and ask questions later.

What makes cooperative bank investments particularly unsettling is their fluid and opaque nature. Unlike scheduled commercial banks, many cooperative institutions operate with weak governance structures, inconsistent audits and limited professional oversight opposite. They send a signal that something is wrong, even if authorities insist otherwise. When communication is poor and transparency lacking, fear fills the vacuum. The Tirumalla Tirupati case illustrates this perfectly. The absence of clear, proactive reassurance turned a regulatory step into a trigger for panic.

The larger danger lies in what this does to the cooperative movement itself. If people begin to see cooperative banks as inherently risky, they will move their savings elsewhere. This shift is already visible. Many depositors now prefer commercial banks or newer financial institutions that are perceived to be more tightly regulated. Once lost, this confidence will be extremely difficult to regain.

It is also important to acknowledge that deposit insurance, often cited as a safeguard, offers only limited comfort. For many families, cooperative banks hold lifetime savings that exceed insured limits. Even where insurance applies, the process is slow and emotionally draining. For a small saver, the mere possibility of losing access to hard-earned money for months or years is enough to abandon the system entirely.

The cooperative sector does not lack relevance. What it lacks is credibility. That credibility can only be restored through serious reform. Governance must improve, audits must be timely and transparent, and management must be professional rather than politically driven. Regulators need to move from reactive firefighting to continuous oversight. Most importantly, depositors deserve honest communication, not reassurances after panic has already set in.

Goa, with its long history of cooperative institutions, stands at a crossroads. Either the sector is strengthened through accountability and reform, or it continues its slow slide into irrelevance. Each new scare pushes it closer to the edge.

The anxiety seen at Tirumalla Tirupati branches should be treated as a warning, not an inconvenience. Savings are not abstract figures. They represent security, dignity and future plans. When people begin to feel that even community banks cannot be trusted with those dreams, the cooperative ideal itself is at risk of collapse. Restoring faith will take time and sustained effort. But ignoring the warning signs will ensure only one outcome. A sector built on trust will fade away, not with a single collapse, but with the quiet withdrawal of public belief.

EDITOR'S SPEAK

Mankurads and the myth of seasonal frenzy

Reports on the arrival of mankurads this season have drawn attention to their steep price of ₹7,200 per dozen, but the narrative around frenzy and exclusivity needs clearer context. These fruits are not being sold in bakeries nor are there long queues. They are available, as they traditionally have been, in local fruit markets, where buyers choose quantities according to their means. That said, the price itself cannot be brushed aside. At ₹600 a fruit, mankurads have effectively moved out of the reach of most ordinary Goan households. What was once a simple seasonal pleasure has now become a luxury item, affordable only to a few. This raises questions not about consumer obsession, but about deeper issues of supply, shrinking orchards, middlemen, and the economics of local agriculture. Seasonal fruits often command higher prices at the start of the season, but such extreme rates highlight how fragile Goa's local produce ecosystem has become. Instead of romanticising the costliness of mankurads or portraying them as objects of indulgence, the focus should shift to why local production has declined and why scarcity has become the norm. There is also a danger in equating high prices with cultural value. Goa's food traditions were built on accessibility and seasonality, not exclusivity. When local fruits turn unaffordable for locals, it signals a loss that goes beyond taste. Rather than sensationalising the price tag, this moment should prompt a serious conversation on supporting local growers, protecting orchards, and ensuring that Goa's seasonal foods remain part of everyday life, not symbols of privilege.

Student deaths at BITS Goa demand urgent accountability

The recent death of yet another student at the BITS Pilani Goa campus, the sixth such incident in barely two years, is deeply disturbing and cannot be treated as routine or coincidental. An institution of national repute owes students and parents far more transparency and accountability than what is currently on display. Repeated fatalities within a closed campus environment point to systemic failures. Questions around student safety, mental health support, supervision and, most alarmingly, the possible presence of drugs on or around the campus must be addressed honestly. Whispered concerns among students and parents about substance abuse can no longer be ignored or brushed aside with vague assurances of "ongoing investigations". These are young lives entrusted to an institution that prides itself on academic excellence. Excellence, however, cannot be limited to classrooms and laboratories. It must extend to student welfare, counselling, early intervention and strict enforcement of zero tolerance towards narcotics. The silence or defensiveness of authorities only deepens public mistrust. At the very least, there should be an independent, time-bound inquiry into all recent deaths, with findings made public. The state government must also conduct a thorough probe into drug access and circulation linked to the campus, involving law enforcement, health experts and education officials. If serious lapses are found and corrective steps are not immediately implemented, the question of stricter regulatory action, including temporary suspension of admissions or administrative overhaul, cannot be ruled out. Institutional reputation cannot be allowed to outweigh student lives. Parents send their children to campuses like BITS with trust. That trust is now shaken. Restoring it requires decisive action, not silence.

Police Say BITS Death Cases Delayed Due To Pending Forensic Reports

Team Goemkarponn

Margao: Investigations into multiple student deaths reported at the BITS Pilani Goa campus have not reached a conclusion due to delays in receiving crucial forensic reports, police and district officials have acknowledged.

Senior officials from the South Goa district administration and police stated that the absence of reports from the Forensic Science Laboratory (FSL) has slowed progress in several cases, preventing investigators from establishing definitive causes of death and completing inquiries.

Authorities said that forensic findings are essential to confirm post-mortem observations and toxicology results, especially in cases where substances were detected during examinations.

Without these inputs, police have been unable to move forward with final conclusions or file closure reports. The delay has affected multiple cases, including deaths reported over the past year, prompting concerns over prolonged investigations.

Officials clarified that the police have completed most procedural steps, but the lack of laboratory analysis remains a major bottleneck.

Chief Minister Pramod Sawant has earlier stated that any final decision or official conclusion regarding the student deaths would be taken only after receiving comprehensive reports from the police and district administration.

The situation has highlighted the strain on forensic services and raised questions about the need to strengthen laboratory infrastructure to ensure timely delivery of reports, particularly in sensitive and high-profile cases

Academic Year 2026-27 To Begin On April 1 For Classes VI To X, XII

Team Goemkarponn

PANAJI: The State government has decided to continue with the revised academic calendar for the academic year 2026-27, with classes for students from Class VI to Class X and Class XII scheduled to commence from April 1.

Primary classes from Class I to Class V will remain outside the revised system for yet another year, with their academic term set to begin on June 6, in line with the earlier practice. Class XI will also follow the June-to-March schedule.

The government has opted to continue enforcing the Rules framed under the Goa School Education Act, 1984, which were notified last year. Under these provisions, the academic year for Classes VI to X and Class XII will run from April 1, 2026, to March 24, 2027, while Classes I to V and Class XI will have their term from June 2026 to March 2027.

This will mark the second year of implementation of the revised calendar, which was introduced to bring State board schools in line with the Central Board of Secondary Education (CBSE) pattern that follows an April-to-March academic cycle.

As per the academic calendar issued by the Directorate of Education, the first academic term will extend from April 1 to October 10, followed by the second term from October 12 to March 24, 2027. Director of Education Shailesh Zingade said that although the academic year start date differs for primary classes, the structure of terms, vacations and holidays for Classes I to V will mirror those prescribed for higher classes.

Govt Says Tirumalla Tirupati Co-Op NOC Revocation Meant To Protect Depositors

Team Goemkarponn

Panaji: Amid growing concerns among depositors and a rush to withdraw funds, the State government clarified that the withdrawal of the No Objection Certificate (NOC) granted to Tirumalla Tirupati Multistate Co-operative Credit Society Ltd was a precautionary step taken in the interest of investors.

Officials stated that the decision followed a regulatory review and an inspection conducted by the Office of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Goa. The action pertains specifically to the cancellation of permission granted to the society to operate and expand 13 branches in the State. Depositors have been given the choice to either withdraw their deposits or continue with their existing investments.

The NOC, earlier issued through official communications dated July 31, 2014, and June 28, 2018, enabling the society to expand its operations in Goa, was revoked with immediate effect after the inspection reportedly revealed multiple irregularities. The society is headquartered in Mumbai and operates branches across Goa, Maharashtra and Karnataka. Registrar of Co-operative Societies Ashutosh Apte said the government's move was aimed at preventing potential losses to investors.

HC Partly Upholds Conviction Of Sisters In Assault On Minor Case

Team Goemkarponn

Panaji: The Goa Bench of the Bombay High Court has sustained the conviction of two sisters for causing injuries to a minor boy using an iron rod, while overturning their conviction on charges of intentional insult and offences under the Goa Children's Act.

Justice Shreeram Shirsat, while deciding a criminal appeal filed by Anita Naik and Kunda Naik, confirmed their guilt under Section 324 of the Indian Penal Code for voluntarily causing hurt by dangerous means, read with Section 34 relating to common intention. The court held that the prosecution had successfully established that the minor suffered bleeding head injuries as a result of the assault.

The case dates back to June 4, 2011, when the child was allegedly attacked near a water tap outside his residence at Bhoma in Ponda. According to the prosecution, one of the accused verbally abused the boy while the other struck him with an iron rod. The injured child was subsequently shifted by ambulance to Goa Medical College, Bambolim, where his wounds required suturing.

While reassessing the evidence on record, the High Court relied heavily on the statement of the injured minor and the supporting medical records. The court observed that the testimonies presented by witnesses in support of the victim were reliable and credible, even though they were related to him. It noted that a witness does not become unreliable merely due to familial ties if the evidence is otherwise convincing and consistent.

However, the court set aside the conviction of the appellants under Section 504 of the IPC for intentional insult and under Section 8(2) of the Goa Children's Act, 2003, finding insufficient grounds to sustain those charges.

MakeMyTrip Introduces Women-Centric Safety and Assurance Signals in Stay and Bus Bookings

■ Using AI, user feedback and partner data, the platform is making key safety and reassurance cues more visible as women plan their journeys

Gurugram: MakeMyTrip, India's leading online travel company, is leveraging technology and user-generated content to help women travellers make more confident choices across accommodation and intercity bus bookings. The approach is informed by behavioural signals observed on the platform, which indicate a more deliberate review journey among women travellers, including higher click-through on reviews, greater time spent on maps and street view, and deeper engagement with guest-uploaded photos before confirming a booking.

These patterns are reinforced by booking behaviour. Women are booking 50 percent more stays at least 15 days in advance and show a 16 percent higher preference for premium and branded properties compared to men. This trend becomes more pronounced as women travellers move from Tier 1 to Tier 3 cities, where branded stays also function as a signal of assurance. On intercity bus routes, solo women travellers also tend to prefer seating arrangements that place them alongside other women rather than in mixed proximity.

When the platform detects that a woman may be planning a stay, key cues surface more prominently.

Ratings submitted by women are highlighted. AI led summaries bring forward cues such as staff behaviour and location safety during the stay search process. Additionally, women specific amenity indicators such as CCTV, door eye, door chains and full-length mirrors are surfaced more clearly to help travellers understand the safeguards in place at the property.

Travellers can also use the Street View option already available on the platform to visually assess the surrounding roads and approach to the property before making a decision.

For intercity bus journeys this same approach is being applied. AI identifies reviews from female only journeys and filters them by areas of concern such as punctuality, safety and cleanliness. Each attribute is assigned a sentiment tag, allowing women to assess feedback quickly and make a decision with greater confidence. When a woman books one side of a double berth the adjacent berth is automatically restricted to female only to avoid mixed proximity.

This enables a basic layer of assurance especially during overnight or long-distance journeys.

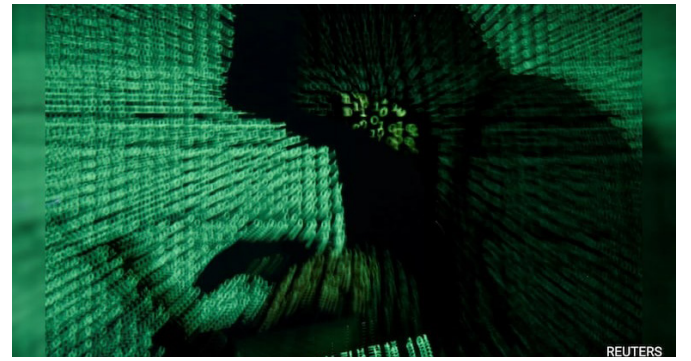

Rajesh Magow, Co-Founder and Group CEO, MakeMyTrip, said, "Women are already careful in planning their travel.

The usage patterns indicate how thoughtfully they evaluate both stays and travel routes. We are trying to make this trip planning process easier for them leveraging our rich data and AI so that they can take informed decisions."

Beneath this lies a dual effort. One layer draws from millions of reviews and user generated signals using AI to understand how women travellers evaluate their stays and travel routes.

The other comes from structured partner data across nearly 97,000 accommodation properties and more than 3,500 intercity bus operators, covering amenities, safeguards and operational practices.

Together they form the base that enables women to see their options more clearly.

Government Prevents Rs 8,189 Crore Cyber Fraud Loss in Four Years

■ Over 23 lakh complaints handled through national reporting system as Centre strengthens digital safety measures.

New Delhi: The central government has prevented cyber criminals from stealing Rs 8,189 crore between 2021 and 2025 through timely intervention in more than 23.61 lakh reported cases.

The information was shared in the Rajya Sabha by the Minister of State for Home Affairs, who outlined the progress made under the Citizen Financial Cyber Fraud Reporting and Management System. The reporting platform, launched in 2021 under the Indian Cyber Crime Coordination Centre, allows victims to immediately flag financial frauds so that transactions can be stopped before money is withdrawn.

Officials stated that the system has played a crucial role in freezing suspicious transfers and tracing fraudulent accounts, leading to significant savings for citizens.

Along with the online portal, the government has also operationalised the toll free helpline number 1930 to assist people in registering complaints.

The minister informed Parliament that more than 12.21 lakh mobile SIM cards and 3.03 lakh device identification numbers linked to cyber crimes have been blocked on the basis of reports received from police authorities across the country. As part of preventive efforts, a new mechanism called the Suspect Registry was introduced in September 2024 in partnership with banks and financial institutions.

This initiative helps identify doubtful transactions at an early stage and prevents funds from moving into mule accounts.

The system has resulted in the rejection of transactions worth Rs 9,055 crore, further reducing potential losses.

Authorities emphasised that cooperation between law enforcement agencies, banks and telecom service providers has been critical in disrupting organised cyber fraud networks.

In another response to the House, the ministry said a comprehensive Standard Operating Procedure was issued in January to create a uniform and victim focused framework for handling financial cyber crime complaints.

The guidelines aim to ensure faster coordination among different stakeholders and quicker relief for affected citizens.

Government data also showed a steady rise in registered cyber fraud cases, increasing from 14,007 in 2021 to 19,466 in 2023. India Has Full Freedom to Choose Its Energy Partners, Says Russia

■ Moscow dismisses claims of pressure to alter New Delhi's long standing oil trade policy

New Delhi: Russia has stated that India remains completely independent in deciding where it purchases crude oil, stressing that New Delhi has always followed a policy of diversified energy sourcing. The Kremlin made it clear that buying oil from multiple suppliers is not a new approach for India and should not be viewed as a political shift. Officials in Moscow rejected suggestions that any external power could dictate India's energy strategy. Russian authorities were responding to recent remarks suggesting that India might replace Russian crude with supplies from other nations. The Kremlin emphasised that Russia has never been the sole provider of petroleum products to India and that commercial decisions are based on economic interests. According to Moscow, cooperation in the energy sector continues to be stable and mutually beneficial. The Russian Foreign Ministry highlighted that the trade in hydrocarbons has helped both countries maintain balanced economic relations and has also contributed to stability in international energy markets. Moscow reiterated its willingness to expand collaboration with India in areas such as oil, gas and refining. Officials noted that there has been no formal communication from New Delhi indicating any intention to discontinue purchases from Russia. Energy specialists pointed out that a sudden replacement of Russian crude would be technically and financially challenging for India. Russian oil is generally heavier and has different chemical characteristics compared to American shale varieties. Refineries in India are configured to process specific grades, and changing them would increase production costs. Experts also observed that the United States may find it difficult to supply volumes equivalent to the large quantities currently provided by Russia. India depends on imports for nearly eighty eight per cent of its crude requirement, making supply security a major national priority. Russian shipments, which were minimal before 2022, increased significantly after global market disruptions. Although the volume has moderated in recent months, Russia continues to remain one of India's important energy partners. Analysts believe New Delhi will continue balancing purchases from various regions to protect its economic interests and ensure affordable fuel for domestic consumers.

The examination confirmed that the locking mechanism remained properly seated in the run position and did not slip to cutoff even when pressure was applied.

■ Massive traffic chaos leaves thousands stranded as overturned vehicle triggers long closure.

New Delhi: A major accident on the Mumbai Pune Expressway led to an unprecedented traffic disruption lasting more than thirty one hours after a tanker carrying propylene gas overturned in the Khandala Ghat section near the Adoshi Tunnel. New Delhi: West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee's decision to personally argue a case before the Supreme Court has generated intense political discussion in the state, with supporters viewing it as a bold stand and critics calling it political theatre. For the first time in India's legal history, a sitting chief minister appeared as a party in person to challenge the Election Commission, making sharp allegations against the poll body. During the hearing before the Chief Justice of India, Banerjee accused the Election Commission of acting unfairly towards West Bengal. She claimed that lakhs of voters were removed from the electoral rolls without being given an opportunity to submit required forms. According to her, the Special Intensive Revision process was being used

Tilak struck 45 from only 19 deliveries and added a rapid partnership with captain Suryakumar Yadav. Later, valuable contributions from Axar Patel and Rinku Singh, along with a sensational ten ball 30 from Hardik Pandya, carried India to an imposing total of 240 for five. Pakistan May Invoke Force Majeure Over T20 World Cup Boycott

■ BCCI dismisses argument as weak while ICC faces potential diplomatic standoff

New Delhi: Pakistan is reportedly considering invoking the force majeure clause to avoid sanctions from the International Cricket Council if it refuses to play its T20 World Cup match against India on February 15. The provision is generally used to cover unforeseeable circumstances that prevent a contractual obligation from being fulfilled, and the Pakistan Cricket Board is said to be exploring it as a last option. If Pakistan withdraws from the fixture, tournament rules state that India would be awarded two points and the PCB could face heavy financial penalties. According to sources, the board may attempt to justify the decision by citing instructions from the Pakistan government, arguing that the situation is extraordinary and beyond its control.
